STORY HYMENIAL STORYS The Reeves-Blackstone Wedding.

Weddings, the marker, without, and so maker how guilty the pacto in interest endeavor to keep the affair the outside world somehow gets wind of it, and what was intended as a secre soon comes to be talked about in privat and public places. Probably it is justing well that it is so, for people must have something to talk about, and what subject could be less harmful, or posses fewer of the evil attributes of gossip than the occasion which witheses the hymencal yows of a man and a woman And thus it has ever been, and thus it will always be the celebration of the nuptial rites cannot fail to attract the attention of the busy world, which stops moment to witness the pleasing sight, trade, and freely published by them, to and to hurriedly throw at the happy pair the effect that I am compelled to discon a hasty congratulation, and then turns to discuss the current gossip about the next wedding. .... The nuptials which were celebrated at St. John's Episcopal church this morning were no exception to this general rule. For weeks society had been on the qui vice, and the week recipients of invitations had ransacked stores and milliner shops for the conventional means of personal adornment. The unpropr tious weather doubtless had the effect to keep many of these articles of dress safely housed away, but the people were there, nevertheless, and quite fashionable was the appearance of the large audience, in spite of their wraps, and umbrellas and overshoes 95430

The church had been handsomely decorated for the occasion, plants and flowers being provided in the greatest profusion, and the manner in which they had been arranged betokened great skill and taste upon the part of those having the matter in charge.

About half-past nine o'clock the organ ist, Mr. George F. Wessels, bogan playing a march, which was the signal that the bridal party was about to enter the church, and all eyes were directed towards the door. The bridge conflanty vill precoded by the step father of the bridge

Mr. W. H. Linn, and his family, after whom came the attendants, in the following order: Miss Eva Bunn, and Mr. Burrows; and Mr. W. D. Better; of Springfield, Miss Lettie Peddecord, and Mr. R. Brandaw, of Baltimore. The attendants took their positions, atothe chancel rail, the bridesmaids to the minster's right, and the groomsmen to the left, and the bride, Miss M. Adele Blackstone, of this city, and the groom, Mr. J. by Mr. J. Ullrich are busy at their H. C. Reeves, of Baltimore, passed up the sisle and took their places at the center of the railing, in front of the pastor of the church, Rev. W. W. De Wolf, who proceeded with the ceremony after the beautiful form of the Protes ant Episcopul Church. Both partie went through the trying ordeal in splened a large pork-packing house during the did style, making the responses charty and distinctly. The ceremony concluded with prayer by Rev. Robert Mackenzie after which the bridal party retired, the audience following.

Any attempt to describe the magnificent costume of the bride would be failure, and we will therefore not attempt it, further than to say that she was dressed in a very rich lavender silk, trimmed in tulle and point lace, A long white weil and wreath of orange blossoms completed her tollet, which was faultless in every respect, and to say that she looked charming, only half expresses the truth. The bridesmaids were dressed in white, with natural flowers for ornaments, and never did brides maids look prettier.

The bride and groom left on the noon train for Baltimore their future home carrying with them the best wishes of everybody in Decatur.
